The EXETER ARMS HISTORY

The buildings that now make up the Exeter Arms were built in 1815 on an area once known as Canary Island. It was called Canary Island because at the time the area was cut off on all sides by water. The pub took its name from the Earl of Essex whose home, Exeter House, stood nearby, roughly where the former police station existed, now Premier Inn. Exeter House was demolished, in 1854.

The Exeter Arms projects the charm of a rural pub in the urban sprawl of Derby city centre. The lounge at the Exeter was further extended in 2017 to connect the adjoining atmospheric cottage, also dating from about 1815, which was originally 31 Exeter Street.

Exeter Street was the birthplace of Herbert Spencer (27 April 1820 - 8 December 1903). Herbert Spencer was active as a philosopher, psychologist, biologist, sociologist, and anthropologist. Spencer originated the expression “survival of the fittest”, which he coined in Principles of Biology (1864) after reading Charles Darwin’s 1859 book On the Origin of Species. Spencer also invented a precursor to the modern paper clip, A blue plaque commemorating Herbert Spencer was put up in 2014 for Derby Civic Society and can be seen above the entrance to the Exeter Arms.

Exeter Street in the 1960s. The house with the plaque above the door was Herbert Spencer’s birthplace. Most of Exeter Street was demolished in 1970.
